

The Frog Prince

Pop
Dean Jones

Verse

1. A prin-cess tossed her gold-en ball. It fell in-to a well so deep. Her fa-vorite toy was gone for good. She sat down and be-gan to weep.

Verse 2

"I'll fetch your ball," a loud voice croaked.
"If you will make this promise true:
To dine with me from your same plate
and let me share your bed with you."

Bridge

The prin-cess tossed her head and laughed. "What an odd am-phib-i-an!" "Yeah, sure," she an-swered with a smirk. The frog bowed once and then dived in.

Verse 3

He fetched the ball and held it out.
He asked her, "Do you want to play?"
"No thanks," she said, and snatched it back,
and to the castle skipped away.

Chorus

Keep your prom-ise, prin-cess. See it to the end. Fill your heart with kind-ness. A frog can be a friend.

Verse 4

That night the princess gasped aloud
when the frog stood at her gate.
"I thought that bargain was a joke!"
she said as he ate from her plate.

Verse 5

The next night he showed up again.
"Oh no." The princess heaved a sigh.
He made her laugh despite herself.
She said, "You are an okay guy."

Chorus

Verse 6

The third night when the frog arrived,
the princess showed him to his seat.
Then, as he hopped up on her bed,
she said, "You know, you're kind of sweet."

Bridge

The next day brought her quite a shock.
The princess cried, "A stranger's here!"
The smiling boy with wide green eyes said, "Fear not! It is I, my dear."

Verse 7

"A wicked witch made me a frog,
cursed to live in that deep well.
But then you chose to be my friend and through your kindness broke the spell."

Outro

Keep your prom-ise, prin-cess. See it to the end. Fill your heart with kind-ness. A frog can be a friend.
